Florida media outlets sue for access to video from Parkland school shooting, three media companies claim in court.

By MATT REYNOLDS

There's no such thing as wrongful birth in Georgia, according to a narrow ruling by a federal judge Thursday in a case involving a Pennsylvania man who has been convicted of shooting three people in Pennsylvania.

By KAYLA GOGGIN

The Virginia Supreme Court on Thursday reversed the murder conviction of two Virginia men whose midnight drag race along a rural road killed two others.

By BRAD KUTNER

A Google attorney on Thursday fought to snuff out a zombie-video maker's class action claim in federal court.

By SEAN DUFFY

U.S. President Donald Trump has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize, the Norwegian news agency said Thursday.

By EMILY ZANTOW

When the stars were switched on in New York and L.A. days ago, the Oscars were a long way off — and the political drama was only beginning.

By WILLIAM DOTINGA

A German federal appeals court has rejected an appeal by a German manufacturer of an anti-immigrant party over its conviction for hate speech.

By BRITAIN EAKIN

Exxon Mobil withdrew from a major natural gas project in Russia due to sanctions imposed by the United States, the oil giant announced Thursday.

By ALEX PICKETT

Four former California lawmakers were found guilty of corruption Thursday, becoming the first members of the state Assembly to be convicted of public corruption in more than two decades.