California's Chief Justice Warns Gun Retailers Who Sell Assault-Style Weapons

By TIM RYAN

The man accused of murderous against by the family of the woman who was found dead in a hanging in a San Diego mansion in 2011 testified Monday he had nothing to do with the death. John Chadwell, 49, had been charged with murder but the case was dropped after the state’s top criminal investigator, an FBI agent, failed to turn over evidence that could have cleared Chadwell of the killing. Chadwell is now being tried on state charges that he improperly entered the home and hanged off the balcony of a San Diego mansion in 2011 testified Monday he had nothing to do with the death.

Man Accused in Hanging Death

By KEVIN LESSMILLER

The Army’s top lawyer said Monday that the military’s current death penalty laws “are constitutional” and “are not broken.” The comment by Maj. Gen. John Regan, the Army’s top criminal investigator, came as the House of Representatives was poised to vote on a bill that would prohibit the military from executing death row inmates. The bill has been a priority for some military officials who say the death penalty is an essential part of the military justice system.

Supreme Court Tackles Law on Post-Divorce

By TIM RYAN

The Supreme Court on Monday denied an appeal by the state of California to move its divorce cases to the federal court system. The court ruled that the state’s system for handling post-divorce issues — including issues such as child support, spousal support, and child custody — is constitutional.

Immigrant Bond Challenge

By BARBARA LEONARD

The Supreme Court on Monday agreed to hear a case brought by a federal judge in California who is challenging a government rule that allows the state to refuse to pay for the release of immigrants who have not been charged with a crime. The case was brought by a federal judge in California who is challenging a government rule that allows the state to refuse to pay for the release of immigrants who have not been charged with a crime.

OPINION

Columnists

By WILLIAM DOTINGA

President Donald Trump is considering是否 to go ahead with a plan to send soldiers to the border of Mexico to help secure the border and prevent illegal immigration. The plan has been met with criticism from some Republicans and members of the military.

LAW

High Court Denies Bid to Block PA Redistricting Map

By NICOLE MACHOR

The Supreme Court on Monday rejected a challenge to Pennsylvania’s new congressional maps, which were drawn by a state Senate committee. The state’s mapmakers drew the new maps after the 2018 elections, when Republicans lost control of the state legislature.

High Court Votes to Uphold Small Claims Chart

By CRISTIN RYAN

The Supreme Court on Monday upheld a small claims court’s decision in a case involving the sale of a house. The court ruled that the court was correct in finding that the seller had breached the contract.

A class of Ohio government workers who have been affected by a payroll system that failed to pay them on time has filed a lawsuit against the state.

Payroll Glitch

By CRISTIN RYAN

A class of Ohio government workers who have been affected by a payroll system that failed to pay them on time has filed a lawsuit against the state.

The state of California is moving ahead with plans to limit carbon emissions and enter a multi-state carbon trading market.

Virginia Airs Plan to Dramatically Cut Carbon Emissions

By BRAD KUTNER

Virginia is proposing to dramatically cut its carbon emissions by requiring companies to buy and sell permits to emit carbon dioxide.

Copyright © 2018

About Us

Search